How Diplomat Lost Fishing Record. That Thomas H. Hohler, the British charge d'affaires, made a great fishing record during two days and a half recently spent at Tampico has just been discovered by his friends.

During the time the diplomat succeeded in bringing to land seven large tarpon, the shortest of which measured four feet and six inches, while the longest would doubtless have broken the record had not an officious shark bitten off his tail just as he was being landed. This fish measured six feet and one inch without his caudal appendage, which deprived Mr. Hohler of the right, doubtless, to hold the record for tarpon hauls. The longest caught up this time measured seven feet and four or five inches.

Mr. Hohler is having two of the fish he caught mounted and will give his friends an opportunity later to see for themselves that this is not just a fish story.—Mexican Herald.

RICH LEDGE IS STRUCK IN TOWNER-LOWELL MINE GROUP

During the past two weeks important development work has been done on the Towner-Lowell group in the Wheatstone mountains, Cochise county, Arizona. This group was recently taken over by the Western Mine and Development corporation of Chicago. The ledge is over 50 feet wide, and from appearances will carry many thousands of dollars to the ton. The point of discovery in the canyon is about 1000 feet lower than where the work is being carried on. No time will be lost by the company in the installation of machinery for working the mine on a large scale.

FOREIGN SYNDICATE SAID TO WANT UNITED VERDE MINE

That an offer has been made senator W. A. Clark by an English and French syndicate for the purchase of the rich United Verde mine near Jerome, Ariz., and that the tender probably will be rejected, is told in financial circles. It is added that several well known Englishmen now in San Francisco, the duke of Sutherland among them, will make an inspection of the Clark mines in a few days.

It is known that more than once during the past 10 years, senator Clark might have disposed of his Jerome mining property at an immense price. At one time the Rothschilds offered him more than $50,000,000 for his holdings, and later the Standard Oil interests raised this figure to $80,000,000, it is said. Both of these offers the senator turned down without hesitation.

MARKETS FIRST BULLION FROM NEW REDUCTION PLANT

The Santa Gertrudis company (camp Bird) Pachuca, Mexico, has marketed the first bullion from its new reduction plant in the Pachuca district, and soon the plant will be running at full capacity. Test runs have been in progress for a month. There are 60 1550 pound stamps and it is expected that each stamp will average over 10 tons daily. The tube mills summing up the company has straightened and retimbered the old San Guillermo shaft of the Santa Gertrudis properties, equipping a new 300 horse power electric hoist, and all ore for the new mill is hoisted through this shaft, delivery being made by conveyor belt. This new plant operating at capacity Santa Gertrudis expects to earn about $250,000 a month.

MINES OF JOHNSON DISTRICT PLAN ACTIVE OPERATIONS

In the Guntulson district, Johnson, Ariz., the Johnson Development company is preparing to start operations in believing it will have a paying proposition after the ore body has been blocked out, and the production of ore is commenced. The Texas and Arizona properties, and the management of the Keystone mines are preparing for operations in the Johnson district in the course of the next few weeks, evidencing a decided revival of mining interest in that district.

Brown and Hart, it is said, intend to put a force of men at work on their claims in the Guntulson district between Cochise and Johnson, with the view of opening up the ore body. They have a silver-lead proposition.

STRIKE RICH ORE AFTER SPENDING $15,000 IN WORK

After an expenditure in the past seven months of $15,000 in the United Gold Mines company, located at Congress, Yavapai county, Arizona, and one-quarter mile south of the well known Congress mine, rich ore has been struck in the 700 foot level. This strike is attracting a great deal of attention. At present the shaft is 700 feet deep, five levels 75 feet apart in a westerly direction on the ore shoot. The 700 foot level has been penetrating a continuous ore body from two to five feet wide. The average assays go from $20 to $200 in gold, being the richest in the history of the mine.

SCHOFIELD STRIKES LARGE VEIN OF SILVER LEAD ORE

Robert Schofield reports the discovery of a large vein of silver-lead ore, which parallels the old Pinal Consolidated property on the west in Pinal county, Arizona. He is now driving a crosscut which will tap the vein about 50 feet below its outcrop. In sinking the location shaft from the surface of the vein he extracted masses of galena ore. The ore is high grade in both silver and lead, and he thinks that his crosscut will open up a large body of shipping ore. The property is located about 18 miles northeast of Florence and about six miles from the Gila river.

Teaching Children to Lie

By MARIE CORTHOPE.

ON a crowded excursion train yesterday I saw a tragedy of childhood that wrung my heart, and an exhibition of meanness on the part of a father that for the first time in my life made me wish that I had the power to punish. This man was guilty not only of wicked cruelty, but of an attempt at subordination of perjury, which my learned legal friends tell me is a serious crime in the eyes of the law.

The train I speak of was, as usual, already crowded to the point of extreme discomfort when it stopped at a station and again the seemingly impossible happened. The incoming rush from the station platform jammed more persons into the car. A family group caught my eye. It was a father, a mother with an infant in her arms and a little girl who was probably eight or nine years old. They were on their way to the beach for a day's outing.

A young man who had been clinging steadfastly to his seat glanced up, saw the mother with a child in her arms and arose. The woman sank wearily into the seat and her husband caught a strap above her head.

It was the fourth member of the group—the little girl—who won my interest and sympathy. She had pushed her way through the crowd, carrying a satchel whose weight taxed her puny strength. It was the impediments of the little army for the day's march, and she bore the burden like a true soldier, although the big, strong father was wholly unencumbered. But her dark eyes snapped with anticipated pleasure of this wonderful outing—perhaps her gladdest day of all the year.

The train creature, despite the motion of the train, held tightly to the satchel. It might have contained all the wealth of a Solomon from the way she jealously guarded it, and she even managed to smile as she was buffeted about in the forest of legs and skirts in the car aisle. Her poor arms could not reach half way to the dangling straps overhead. No one seemed to pay the least attention to her.

Then came the conductor. He was preparing and irritable. At his demand for tickets the father handed him two slips of pasteboard.

"Who pays for this girl?" the conductor snarled. A frightened look came into the child's eyes.

"We don't pay for her. She is too young," said the father.

"She's more than six and you'll have to pay. Hurry, now!"

"No, she doesn't pay," insisted the father.

"How old are you?" demanded the conductor, grasping the child by the shoulder.

The little girl, her eyes filled with horror and fright like those of a doe with the pack at her throat, shook her head.

"How old are you?" shouted the conductor.

The child was dumb. Her lips trembled and she bowed her head.

"That child is more than six and you've got to pay for her or she'll have to get off the train," said the conductor finally.

The father grumblingly paid the 15
